NSU, BEI offer course on multilateral system

Business Desk

The Bangladesh Enterprise Institute and the North South University will jointly offer a two-month course on 'Multilateral system and its impact on Bangladesh' starting on June 12.

The lecture will cover the profound changes in the aftermath of 9/11, Islamic militancy, doctrine of preemption, slow-paced poverty alleviation and poor governance. It is open to all participants from diverse background at a nominal cost. The aim is to provide insight into core issues of multilateral system and their strategic significance. The once-a-week lectures will be held from 6:30pm to 8:00pm at the NSU campus. Former ambassadors who taught in the previous BEI lecture series and experts will speak in-depth on the topics. The course will end on July 31, 2006 with a certificate awarding ceremony.
